Screening Assignment

Heirloom

A voice-first digital sanctuary for family history.
Built to preserve intergenerational stories for the next 100 years.

"We are what we keep."

Heirloom
Taste Flow Micro-copy System
Design-Challenge

The Problem

When our elders pass, their stories vanish.
We have photos what they looked like but we lose their voice who they were

The Solution

A secure, high-fidelity vault for oral history.
Every story is treated as a permanent asset,
not a disposable post.

The Vibe: Calm, Heavy, and Meaningful. It is the opposite of a "Story" on Instagram.
It doesn't disappear in 24 hours; it is built to be discovered by your great-grandchildren.

Heirloom
Taste Flow Micro-copy System
Design-Challenge

01 • TASTE

The Digital Locket

The Playback Artifact

In 2025, audio players look like 'admin tools/progress bars, timestamps, 1x buttons. This is fine for a podcast, but terrible for a memory of your late grandfather.
How do you convey weight and preciousness?
How does it look 'heavy' with time?

1960s

"The Summer We Found the Old Letters"
as told by Grandpa William
Recorded March 14, 1962 • 12 min 34 sec

Heirloom
Taste Flow Micro-copy System
Design-Challenge

02 • MICRO-COPY

The Anti-Growth Hack

Invitations, Not Interruptions

Heirloom wants to re-engage a user who hasn't visited the archive in 6 months.
We strictly forbid 'shame-based' notifications.
Create 'Anticipation of Meaning' rather than 'Fear of Missing Out.'

A Voice from the Past 01

There's a story here you haven't heard yet.
Grandma Ruth spoke about summers at the lake house. It's been waiting for you.

- Push Notification

Time Has Passed 02

Six moons ago, you were listening.
Your grandfather's laughter is still here preserved exactly as it was.

- Push Notification

An Unopened Gift 03

Someone left you a piece of themselves.
Your aunt's story about her first day in America remains unwrapped.

- Push Notification

Heirloom
Taste Flow Micro-copy System
Design-Challenge

03 • FLOW

The Proustian Trigger

Capturing Natural Moments

The biggest friction in oral history is the 'Interview Effect.'
When you put a microphone in someone's face, they freeze up.
The best stories happen naturally.
This contextual trigger system captures memories in fewer than 3 taps.

Liminal Moment Detected 10:32 AM
Sunday morning. You're at your childhood home for the first time in months.

Gentle Prompt Contextual trigger
"The kitchen looks just like it did in '89. Does this bring back any memories?"

One-Tap Record < 3 taps
Hold anywhere to capture. Release to preserve forever.

Heirloom
Taste Flow Micro-copy System
Design-Challenge

04 • SYSTEMS

The Ecosystem Balance

Honoring the Curator

Families are obsessed with having the full history (Demand) but treat the work of recording it as a chore (Supply).
The ecosystem stalls because being the 'Family Historian' feels like a thankless job.
This system makes the Interviewer feel just as high-status as the Storyteller.

The Storyteller
The keeper of memories.
Their voice becomes a permanent gift to future generations.
The Legacy

The Curator
The architect of preservation.
Honored as the guardian who ensures stories survive.
The Bridge

Equal Honor • Both roles celebrated in the family vault

© 2025 Heirloom